ABSTRACT

This report contains 1971-72 data for 90 senior institutions and 47 junior institutions, for a total of 137 Illinois institutions. The data in the report are presented in two sections. The first section contains the senior institutions and the second section the junior institutions. Space limitations demanded that the sub-bachelor's degrees and awards for the senior institutions be combined under a single heading of sub-bachelor's. The data are reported in terms of both the number of degrees and the percent of the state total the degrees represent. Separate bases have been used for senior and junior institutions for computing percents. Thus any reported for senior (junior) institutions really is the percent of the total for senior (junior) institutions in the State. (Author/PG)

This report could not have been produced in the limited time available without computer aid. Therefore, a special note of appreciation is due to Director A. F. Graziano and his staff of the Urbana Office of Administrative Data Processing. Furthermore, Mrs. Irene Lofton, Supervisor of Duplicating Service, Stenographic Bureau, was most helpful in providing duplicating, assembling and binding service schedules to accommodate the publication date of this survey. For the typing of the original manuscript copy Diana Brayman, Stenographer in the University Bureau of Institutional Research, is gratefully acknowledged. Finally, thanks go to Mrs. Sandra Griffin and Mrs. Helen Wright, Statistical Clerks with the University Bureau of Institutional Research, for their help with a variety of necessary clerical tasks.

Background and Nature of the Report

In recent years a number of representatives of Illinois colleges and universities have expressed interest in the accumulation of historical data on degrees granted by institutions of higher education in the State of Illinois. Historical data on degrees granted are a logical companion to the annual survey of college enrollment in Illinois conducted for many years by the University Bureau of Institutional Research of the University of Illinois.

During the past year the University Bureau of Institutional Research decided to attempt to meet the expressed need for trend degree data. Data in available United States Office of Education publications were compiled and sent to the institutions in the State for verification and update. The resulting data have served as the basis for this report.

The degree categories specified in the materials sent to the institutions--Bachelor's, Master's, Doctor's, Professional, Associate, 2-4 Year Certificate, and 1-2 Year Certificate--were not clearly defined, and thus may have presented some difficulty for the institutions. These categories are the ones used in recent USOE reports of degree data from the HEGIS (Higher Education General Information Survey) reports, and it was intended that the definitions used for HEGIS degree reporting would apply. This point will have to be made more clear in future updates of the data. The fact that the HEGIS definitions and/or degree categories have changed from time to time no doubt made it difficult for the cooperating institutions to fit the data for a number of years under a single set of degree categories.

The degree data included in the present report cover the period 1957-58 through 1971-72. This time span was selected in order that the data would be as comparable as possible, time-wise, with the enrollment survey data. Since the verification-update request was sent to institutions in February 1973, the degree data for 1972-73 are not yet available.

The data in the report are presented in two sections. The first section contains the senior institutions and the second section the junior institutions. Space limitations demanded that the sub-bachelor's degrees and awards for the senior institutions be combined under a single heading (SUB-BACHELOR'S). For the junior institutions it was possible to report the various types of sub-bachelor's degrees and awards under separate headings.

The data are reported in terms of both the number of degrees and the percent the degrees represent of the state total. Separate bases have been used for senior and junior institutions for computing the percents. Thus any percent reported for senior (junior) institutions really is the percent of the total for senior (junior) institutions in the State.

The report contains 1971-72 data for 90 senior institutions and 47 junior institutions, for a total of 137 institutions (Schools with one or more branch campuses, or systems having two or more campuses, are counted as one institution.). The only institutions intentionally omitted completely from the report were those that had discontinued operation and for which absolutely no data were available.

If the degree data set forth in this report prove to be valuable in the format presented, the report will be continued and brought up to date next year. Next year's report will also contain a certain amount of analytical manuscript.
